We Mourn the Loss of Profits.

GREAT FIFTY CENTS ON THE DOLLAR

SALE OF CLOTHING

We are going to make some improvements in our store room after January 1st. The contract is signed and sealed with the contractors—consequently we are compelled to sell our stock or pack it away. We prefer selling it at a sacrifice.

NOTHING RESERVED.

Every suit of Clothes, every Overcoat, every Pair of Pants marked in plain figures. We will just split them in half. This means 50 cents on the dollar. The cheapest sale of fine ready made Clothing in Kentucky.

Our business is not conducted by fakes and guessing schemes. The man that's selling watch chains on the street corner for $1, throwing in a watch just to show his generosity, needs watching. "Bunco Steers," "Razle Dazzle" tricksters and green goods sharps always promise great returns from small investments. Intelligent minds are on to the racket; and take no stock in such humbuggery. 'Tis value they want.

100 CENTS WORTH OF GOODS

FOR 100 CENTS IN CASH

Is what we give the people. But at this sale

100 CENTS WORTH AT 50 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR!

Every article in our establishment is ticketed at the lowest price possible. The stamp of durability is on every garment.

If you have not dealt with us, ask your neighbor, who has. We invite you to our store, feeling assured that you will be pleased with our garments and satisfied with the matchless values we offer.

TO THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY.

An Address From the Louisville Commercial Club.

The Louisville commercial club desires most earnestly to call your attention to the importance of having Kentucky properly represented at the World's Columbian exposition at Chicago in May, 1893. The state must erect buildings in which to show its resources, and much hard and patriotic work must be done before the doors of the grand exposition are thrown open. Other states are making elaborate preparations to astonish the people of the globe by their magnitude and growth. In agricultural, timber, live stock, and mineral wealth, and in many other respects, Kentucky has no superior. All citizens who have the good of the commonwealth and their own interest at heart, are urged to assist by act and precept, in doing all things needful to the end that our state may be seen in its best light when brought into comparison with the other commonwealths. That we may be helped in this work, all counties, commercial bodies, alliance, grange, labor, and other reputable organizations of every character, are requested to send not more than six or less than four delegates, each to a State world's fair conference, to be held in the exchange hall of the board of trade of Louisville, January 20-21, 1892, under the auspices of the commercial club. Mayors or other proper chief executives of cities and towns are invited to participate in the conference as delegates. Each newspaper in the state is invited to be represented by a delegate at the conference. Counties are requested to hold mass meetings at once, said meetings to be called by the judge of the county court, or in his absence or failure to do so, by the county attorney or a committee of citizens, select representatives and forward the names of delegates to the secretary, so that preparations for the meeting may be conducted intelligently. If deemed best, delegates may be appointed by the judge of the county court or by the county attorney, in lieu of a mass meeting.

Let us unite as one family and secure every possible advantage from the rare opportunity offered to advertise our state. Low railroad rates will prevail, and the conference, which will be addressed by men of national repute, will be one of interest to all.

Louisville's industries and other interests are to be simply cared for at the fair through private and municipal enterprise, and it is principally desired that our interior products and resources should receive the attention of the conference. OWEN GATHEBRIGHT, JR., LUCIEN ADKINS, Sec'y. Pres.

Capital Notes From Sentinel-Democrat.

It was a neck and neck race for the speakership between Hon. W. M. Moore and Hon. Harvey Myers, which shows that both are good men and have a host of friends. Col. Moore had a margin of only two votes. Col. Moore is an experienced legislator and will make a good speaker. He carried almost the solid vote of Eastern Kentucky members.

Hon. J. M. Pieratt, of Morgan, made a creditable race for doorkeeper of the senate, considering the short time in which he had to work. Mr. Pieratt is a man of solid worth and generally gets what he goes for, but in this instance he did not begin in time.

W. O. Mize was elected enrolling clerk of the senate over three formidable opponents, which is evidence that his splendid work as enrolling clerk of the last house was appreciated.

BRIEF EDITORIALS AND NEWS NOTES.

Gov. Brown's message to the Kentucky legislature is said to have been one of the ablest state papers ever read before any general assembly of the state. The governor points out many reforms and directs the attention of the legislature to the importance of enacting laws to bring them about. He shows that the distillers in only a few counties pay the taxes they should, and suggests that a penalty be imposed upon all county attorneys who fail to collect said taxes. All are agreed that the message is just the thing.

Tennessee convicts to the number of 120 have been returned to the Coal Creek mines, and a company of 100 soldiers are encamped near the mines to see that the convicts are not interfered with by free miners. The soldiers are armed with regulation army rifles, and besides have a Gatling gun and a mountain howitzer for use in an emergency. The troops have new United States uniforms, leggings, mittens, etc., and are provided for against the weather. A car load of ammunition has also been sent to the camp.

The alarm along the Texas border over the Garza revolution is becoming intense. Garza is known to have 1,000 or 1,200 men with him, many of whom are Mexican regulars who joined him after murdering Gen. Lorenzo Garcia, their commander. Capt. Hardie, of the United States forces came up with 200 of the bandits and drove them into the chapparrel. Garza threatens to take Fort Ringold, and it is not improbable that he may do so, in which event the United States will suffer severe losses.

Speaker Crisp certainly acted very badly in not making Mr. Mills chairman of the ways and means committee, and his failure to do so certainly gave the Democratic party a black eye, though it will tend to enhance Mills in the estimation of the people. This act alone demonstrates the unfitness of Crisp for the position he occupies, and before congress adjourns that body will have realized its mistake in placing a man of such little idea in the speaker's chair.

Treasurer Hale created quite a sensation at Frankfort last week by sending Gov. Brown his resignation and notifying him that he would not qualify on Monday last. All sorts of rumors were rife as to who would succeed him, but subsequently he concluded he did not want to resign, and all speculation was thus knocked into a cocked hat.

Georgia is going dry, so far as saloons are concerned. On Monday licenses were issued to 25 saloons in Atlanta where there used to be 289. At Savannah 50 saloon keepers failed to make the blind good and dropped out. The saloons of Augusta are also to be reduced at least one-half in number.

The appeal from the commercial club of Louisville, which we publish on the first page of our paper, should command the attention of every man in this section interested in the development of our resources, and we commend it especially to the consideration of our county judge and county attorney.

Since the death of Senator Plumb, of Kansas, it has been currently reported, and certainly believed by many, that ex-Senator John J. Ingalls would be appointed to the vacancy. Gov. Humphrey, however, has appointed ex-Congressman B. W. Perkins to succeed the dead senator.

The Bourbon News entered upon the twelfth year of its existence last Friday, and bids fair to improve as it grows older, though it is now one of the spiciest sheets in the state. Here's wishing Bro. Champ a happy and prosperous new year.

Gov. R. P. Flower was inaugurated at Albany, N. Y., Friday, and a large crowd was present to see the ceremony.

MORGAN COUNTY.

Real Evolutions.
Now rolls the year of '92.
Some people now good deeds they'll do.
On new year's day they all begun.
They fixed that time for previous fun.
To fix a time and then begin,
Appears to me uncommon thin.
Why not do right because 'tis best.
On Christmas day and all the rest.
The vows you make are not to men,
God knows you now as well as then.
And when you said I will not drink,
You should have taken time to think.
That boasting vows without a will
Will breed a lie and fool you still.
I write the above for one and all.
For broken vows are nothing small.

Dorsey Pieratt has been very sick for several days, but has now about recovered. Mrs. Ada Ainsparger has also been on the sick list, but is about up again. T. E. Johnson's little boy, Bertie, has been quite ill for a few days. With these exceptions the health of the town is good, but several deaths in the country the past week, as follows: On Dec. 31, William Mannin; on same day, infant child of James Davis; on the 2nd inst., wife of Abner Lawson; same day, infant child of Hiram Spence.

J. M. Pieratt and son, Stevie, left this morning for Lexington, where Stevie will attend college and get all the wrinkles in book-keeping.

A Mr. Colegrove, at Washington, gets the mail route between this place and West Liberty.

Hugh Beatty, the smiling musical agent of Beattyville, was in town last week.

J. M. Perry, one of Morgan's brightest school teachers, was in town Saturday.

Howard Wilson, from Montgomery county, was in town last week.

H. M. Fannin made a coffin on each of the three first days of this year.

Woodie Cull and Miss Maggie Spence were married last week.

Jan. 4. BLUNT.

Maytown Miscell.
At a special term of Squire W. C. Hill's court held here Saturday, the docket was: Commonwealth vs. Melvin Wells, assault and battery on the person of A. V. Nickell. On motion of I. W. Rose, defendant's attorney, the court dismissed the case. Commonwealth vs. same, for carrying concealed weapons. The jury, after hearing the evidence and half-hour's speech from Mr. Rose, and instructions of the court, returned a verdict of not guilty.

At a meeting of Maytown lodge, No. 656, F. A. M., held Dec. 26, 1891, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: E. B. May, W. M.; J. T. Sexton, S. W.; A. C. Swango, J. W.; Jordan Wills, Treas.; J. C. Swango, Sec'y; R. A. Childers, S. D.; O. W. McNabb, J. D.; L. T. Bolin, S. & T.; James E. Wright, Chap.

If we fail to send up new subscribers we will try our hand at drumming for your stationery department. Find enclosed $1.75 for 500 envelopes. Send to R. A. Childers. What puzzles the people here is how you manage to get them up in such nice style for so little money.

"Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this stamp—THE ROCHESTER. If the lamp dealer has not the genuine Rochester, and the style you want, send to us for our new illustrated catalogue, and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 3,000 varieties from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.

Members of Mizpah lodge, No. 507, F. A. M., are requested to meet at the hall over Pieratt & Co.'s store on Saturday night, as business of importance will come before the lodge.

Leander Brooks was thrown from his horse a few days ago and sustained a very severe fracture of the clavicle. Dr. Taulbee did the job for him and he is now getting along all right.

A stay of proceedings having been granted so the case can be reviewed in the court of appeals, Isaac Murphy will not be hanged at Salversville today (Friday), as previously announced.

Josh DeBusk has bought the residence of W. C. Coldiron and will improve the dwelling this spring by enlarging it. His partner, John S. Rose, will also buy a lot and build a residence in the spring.

Postoffice Inspector Sam D. Brown, of Parkland, Ky., paid Postmaster W. T. Caskey a visit on the 4th inst., gave him office a thorough overhauling and complimented him very highly on finding his office and records in first-class order. In fact he says it is one of the best kept offices in Eastern Kentucky. Taylor, as he is familiarly called by his friends, is our nearest neighbor, and we have reason to remember many courtesies from both he and his wife. Mr. Caskey is a successful merchant and farmer, and a Republican as sound and true as any who sail under the colors of the present administration. May he live long and prosper, and always be postmaster—if he wants to.

KITCHENS, O., Jan. 1, 1892.—Mr. Editor: Enclosed please find $1, for which send me THE HERALD, for I can not do without hearing from my old Kentucky home. Sorry I can not send you some subscribers, but as I am the only Kentuckian that I know of in this country the paper don't interest them as much. What has become of the Stillwater and Beattyville correspondents? Oh, how I wish you had a writer from St. Helena. Come along, old friends, and help make your country's paper interesting.

Mrs. MARY EVANS. [Mrs. Evans was a Miss Hounshell, and was born and raised in the Clifty neighborhood, we believe.—Editor.]

A special from Stanton to the Courier-Journal, dated Jan. 4, says: "A man named Hagerty had brought a suit for damages against Judge J. W. Lilly, and employed Hon. Rodney Haggard to defend him. During his argument Mr. Haggard made a statement reflecting on Judge Lilly, who at once rose and called him a liar. Mr. Haggard picked up an inkstand and hurled it at Judge Lilly's head. It struck Judge Lilly's attorney, Mr. Phillips, and glancing, struck Arthur Carey, of Louisville. Judge Lilly was ready to go at Mr. Haggard, when friends interfered and the court adjourned. It is feared there will be more trouble."

Aunt Exey, the venerable mother of Judge George W. Carson, whose illness was mentioned in this paper last week, died at the home of Judge Carson on Friday at midnight, and her remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground on Judge Carson's farm Saturday evening. Aunt Exey was a good woman and many will be the regrets expressed when the news of her death is known. She was aged 86 years.

The attention of our readers is directed to the advertisement headed "Public Sale," which will be found on this page of our paper. Mr. Scoobe has engaged in the lumber business at Winchester, and any one who desires to purchase an elegant blue grass farm may secure a bargain by attending this sale. Remember that it will be sold on the 20th inst., and if you want it be on hand to bid.

Col. E. Polk Johnson is now printing the Capital as a daily, and it comes to us chock full of legislative news. The last issue we had contained the governor's message as a supplement, which shows that Col. Johnson is full of newspaper enterprise. May he live long and prosper, and the Capital return him much capital to invest in the Boonesboro turnpike company, or otherwise.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Day returned Monday from Mt. Sterling, where they were summoned when Mrs. J. G. Trimble's illness was first announced, and where they remained until after her death and funeral. The sympathy of the community goes out to Mrs. Day, who was overcharged with grief before her mother's death, and this last stroke has well nigh prostrated her.

Henry Godsey, who spent the holidays at home with his father and mother, left Monday morning for Danville. Centre college will some day point with pride to the fact that Henry was one of her scholars.

A. H. Stamper, the rising young attorney of Campton, paid our office a pleasant call Wednesday. He came over to take depositions in a case on Lacy creek, the particulars of which we did not hear.

Dr. J. C. Hollan was awarded judgment in the Powell common pleas court, Monday, for $50 damages against John Burgess for throwing whisky in his eye. He sued for $10,000.

Campton Curraney. Isaac Elkins has gone to Texas to buy him a farm.

Robert L. Carroll has accepted a position as clerk in Elkins' store.

Douglas Evans killed an owl a few days ago that measured five feet from tip to tip.

Harvey H. Stamper left a few days ago for Louisville, where he will attend medical college.

Kelly Fuiks came home Thursday night from McNabb, where he had been to locate a saw mill.

Prof. A. F. Byrd delivered one of the ablest speeches at the Christmas tree we ever heard in this place.

Rev. R. D. Biven passed through here yesterday en route to New Spring church, in Lee county, to fill his appointment.

G. T. Center and Prof. A. F. Byrd returned Friday from Stanton, where they had been attending common pleas court.

There was a social party at G. T. Center's a few nights ago. About 50 young people were present and all had a fourth of July time.

I mailed my letter to THE HERALD last Monday, but suppose it never reached THE HERALD office. Surely there is something rotten in Denmark.

Judge Spradling is making the best police judge Campton ever had, and with such a marshal as J. P. Hall violators had better look out. Let the good work go on.

W. B. Duff, Esq., recently purchased of Isaac Elkins his storehouse and lot, for which he paid $750. He will move to it in the spring and will open up a butcher shop and market house.

Dr. James H. Stamper, who says he would rather part with his wife than THE HERALD, reports the following on the sick list: Prof. F. A. Savage, Mrs. Elkanah Duff and Mrs. Arkilla Bell.

Christmas has come and gone, and we have been launched out upon a new year. Let us do better during the year 1892 than any year of our past lives, and if we never live to witness the closing of another year, be prepared to ascend heaven on rosy clouds and enter heaven's blissful clime, where white winged angels flutter beneath the rainbow arches of a glorious elysium, and where over the city towers the great white throne like some snow-clad mountain, sunken, bathed and irradiated in gorgeous hues.

BOONEVILLE, Ky., Jan. 2, 1892.—Dear Sir: I this day enclose $1 in cash, for which I want you to send me THE HERALD, as I think it is the best paper for the mountains of Kentucky ever published. Hoping you will confer a favor by sending it in the next mail, I remain, respectfully, &c., FANNY ROSE.

SABINE, IND., Jan. 1, 1892.—Spencer Cooper: Enclosed find $1, for which send me your valuable paper for one year to the P. O. address above, and oblige.

Do You Need Money?

If so, you can get something better than dollars from us. The completion of the K. U. R. R. to Jackson has cut us off from a large wholesale trade heretofore had by us in several counties east, and left on our hands an immense stock of goods, which we are compelled to unload, and in order to do so we are determined to make prices do the work, prices which will make our patrons happy and make competition well. We offer to Country Merchants extra inducements, and guarantee to them lower prices than they ever got before. We are overstocked, and must unload. Remember we will duplicate any bill, with freight added, either wholesale or retail, east or west, north or south, up hill or down. We are now receiving country goods, brought for cash at bottom bargains, as will fill every department. New, fresh, reasonable, choice and cheap. We can astonish you with

HAZEL GREEN, N. Y.

AT THE DAWNING.

On in the hush of the morning breakers,
There came a twitter of startled birds;
I turned to see of the child, awaking,
The first faint herald of daylight heard.
Sweet eyes looked into mine that love them,
In the gray peace of the dawning dim,
As the black wings up to the light above them,
Thrilling the morn with their main hymn.
Quiet we lay and smiled to each other,
Over the side of the little bed,
Till the child said softly: "I hear you, mother."
"Darling, I did not speak," I said.
A happy light on her face came playing;
"Yes, you are speaking—I hear, I know—
Your eyes are talking! I see them saying,"
"Dear little girl, I do love you so."
Then she nestled down to her restful sleeping,
Laying a palm palm 'neath her cheek,
With childish trust in the daylight keeping
Of the love that needed not to speak.
The birds sang on, and their praises, swelling,
Rose up a prayer on their melody,
And the peace that passeth human telling
Pell on my little child and me.

"Well, Mr. Scraggs," Harry replied after a short silence, "I don't admit anything you have charged, but say you are correct, and I must be acknowledged that you are not above reproach. Your virtuous indignation don't commence quite soon enough. It begins where the profits leave off. In other words you are willing to condemn my crimes, as you choose to call them, and even assist me in executing them, as long as there is money in it to you. But the moment they cease to bring a financial return to your pocket you get terribly down on them. You are willing to help 'rob and plunder' the settlers because it pays you, but there is no profit in trapping the deer, so your virtuous soul recoils at the idea. That is the size of your honor, Scraggs."

"I admit that appearances do seem against me, Pearson, for after being a tool in your hands, so long," said Scraggs with emphasis, "it would be a miracle if I had an honorable impulse left in my bosom. But miracle as it is, I have a spark of honor yet unquenched. I would say what I have, and oppose your designs on Green," said Scraggs, "if I lost money by it. In a case like this money cuts to figure with me."

"You are very pious all at once, Scraggs," said Pearson with a light laugh. "And I wonder you didn't turn preacher in your young days. You would have made an eloquent sermonizer. But we'll drop this subject. If you please, for the present, and when I form designs against Green's girl, such as you mention, and find I am in need of your assistance in carrying them out, I'll put up the staff and make you solid."

"You'll do no such thing," Scraggs exclaimed with wrath as he arose and paced the floor. "No money will induce me to aid in betraying that girl or any other girl into your power. But I'll tell you what I will do," Scraggs said, stopping before Pearson and looking him square in the eyes. "I'll warn John Green

"I'll warn John Green against you, and I'll warn the girl against you."

"You will?" exclaimed the young man springing up with flashing eyes and clinched fists. "You will, eh?"

"Yes, I will," replied Scraggs, calmly maintaining his position.

"For a minute the two men stood silently eyeing each other, Scraggs cool, collected and immovable, and Pearson at first angry and flushed, but slowly calmer down. At last the latter broke into a light laugh, and with a toss of the head spoke:

"Don't be a fool, Scraggs," he said, "because that don't pay. I have no designs on the girl, and besides if I did have your putting in wouldn't do any good. Do you suppose the Greens or any of the other settlers would take your word in preference to mine? Of course they wouldn't. It's you that is known as a heartless villain, while I, in the shade back of you, am known as a kind, feeling gentleman. Those people don't know that I move you and control your actions, and more it is hardly likely that they will know it, since there is no one to tell them but you, and they'd never take your word for anything, not if you were to swear to it. So you see I have got the advantage of you, Scraggs, and if you want to do any winning just go ahead. But you are making a great fuss about nothing, anyhow. Wait until I make an attempt against the girl, won't you?"

"If you have no designs on the girl, Pearson," asked Scraggs, "will you please say what your purpose is?"

"Why, what should it be, except to make all the money we can out of Green, just as we intend to make it out of every other settler?"

"Then how is it you do not find it necessary to deport yourself toward other settlers as you do toward the Greens? Why is it you find it necessary to go there so often?"

"I supposed this was a free country, Scraggs, and that a man did not have to explain to other people the reason why he chooses to go here or there. But now you force the question on me. I don't mind answering it. I go to John Louise's occasionally because I like Louise. To be honest, frank and confidential with you, Scraggs, I'll go further and say I love her. The help me the truth when I say that, so you help me. I do love Louise Green with all my heart and soul, and never have and never shall love anyone else. And now having gone this far, I'll further love her, and I've sworn that she shall be mine. She loves that Paul Maricam, but he shall never have her. I cannot win her love, but I can get her in my power, and force her to come to my arms and submit to my caresses, and by Heaven I will."

"Harry Pearson, beware! This is going too far, and they shall be warned," said Scraggs, "and you know they will. They'll not be here a week you say. I'm not afraid of you, for you are powerless."

"Alas! that is too true. I am the demon and you are the saint, and your lies will be taken as gospel truth, while the truth I speak will be believed by none. So much for being your tool. But, nevertheless, it is my duty to warn them against you, and I'll do it. I'll give them fair warning, and if they don't want to heed it they can only suffer the consequences. If you wanted to marry the girl now—"

"Bah! I don't want to marry her, and I don't propose to do anything of the sort. You know that that matter is settled for me. The folks at home have kindly selected a woman for me, and all I have to do is to go back and marry her. I don't like to go to do in a few weeks. I don't love her and never did, but she is rich, and money is what we are after."

Scraggs made no reply to this, and Pearson went on:

"I shall have there and marry that woman but I will not be compelled to stay there with her. I will soon find an excuse for coming west, and once here I will work my wiles and find my happiness in the society of my little white flower of the plains."

CHAPTER XI
ONCE AGAIN HARRY PEARSON went east for the purpose of getting married. He had not gone to Green's more than once or twice after the conversation which had taken place, but he consoled himself in leaving with the thought that it would not be long before he was back again, and he hoped by that time to be able to sway Louise to his side. The society of my little white flower of the plains."

Along in October Harry Pearson went east for the purpose of getting married. He had not gone to Green's more than once or twice after the conversation which had taken place, but he consoled himself in leaving with the thought that it would not be long before he was back again, and he hoped by that time to be able to sway Louise to his side. The society of my little white flower of the plains."

Scraggs, said nothing to the Greens of the young man's intentions, for in the first place he realized that they would be slow to believe him, and in the second place he found it a little difficult to approach them on such a subject. Then again he told himself that it would be premature, anyhow, to point their eyes to him as a betrayer, that once married Harry would give up his designs on Louise, and even if he didn't it would be time enough to speak when Pearson came back. So the matter rested.

The boom at Paradise Park assumed greater proportions every hour. The sale of lots grew greater day by day, and at last the rush of customers was so overwhelming that Scraggs found it necessary to take in two extra assistants. Several new buildings were put in course of erection, and three newspapers, two of them with daily issues, were established in the town.

Many of the lots were sold two or three times within as many days, and always at a large advance. Speculation ran wild and option dealing became the rage of the hour. John Green made no effort to sell his lots, for they were well located, and he felt secure in holding them. They would go on increasing, he thought, as when the railroad companies began to construct their lines into the place, and all the other public improvements were put under way, their value would go beyond anybody's expectations. He determined to hold them, and hold them he did.

But Scraggs made an effort to sell them, and in a short time he found a customer who offered to take them at double what John paid. Scraggs sold for John and laid the offer before him, saying:

"It is a big profit on the investment, Mr. Green, and my advice is to take it. 'No,' said John. 'I can do better than that next year. Wait till the railroads come in.'"

"I tell you, Green," Scraggs went on, "now is a good time to sell. You double your money, and that is profit enough. Take my advice and sell it. I can lose your money where it will be safe, and where it will bring you good interest. Make the change then when the mortgage on your farm is due you will have the money to pay it off."

But John shook his head, saying: "You can get no interest to equal the profits on the lots, and besides I would rather not turn surer."

Scraggs was silent for a little while, during which he looked hard at the girl. Then looking up he said:

"Green, I have a purpose in advising you as I do. I do not like to say what that purpose is, but I assure you it is an honest one, and besides it is well founded. For your own good I advise you to this step. Get your money out of these lots, and keep it out."

John made no reply but looked at Scraggs incredulously. The agent saw that he had made no impression, and he continued:

"Will you promise upon your oath, Green, never to whisper a word of what I am going to tell you?"

"Yes, if it is right that I should not."

"I don't know that it would be exactly right, but I know it would be to your interest, and would, if you acted on it, save your money and save you from a great deal of suffering, perhaps. But be that as it may, I won't reveal any secret. It wouldn't be safe. I will say, though, let those lots go and make your money secure."

"Isn't it secure where it is?" John asked.

"You heard what I said, Mr. Green," Scraggs replied, "and ought to be able to draw your own conclusions. I say take your money out of the lots and make it safe. That's all I can say or will say to anyone else. I have a reason for advising you to this step, and strange as it may seem, it is altogether for your interest that I do it."

It's a little strange, indeed, Mr. Scraggs," John said with an incredulous shake of the head, "and you should feel such an uncommon interest in my welfare. I cannot understand why you should make so great an exertion in my favor. Why am I alone selected from all your customers to receive the benefit of your advice? Am I more to you than any of the hundreds of others who have invested in these lots?"

"You are right, Green, you are not more to me than the others. But it is not that which influences me. There is not a man among all my customers whom I would thus advise as I do you, were he placed in the circumstances that it is folly to talk and argue. Here is a customer for your lots. Take my advice and sell out."

"No," said John. "I'll keep them. I know your object, Mr. Scraggs—I can see through it perfectly. Those lots are destined to sell for an enormous price, and you know it. You see a thousand dollars a lot, and you want them. You are the man who proposes to buy them. You are sly, Scraggs, and you can hatch out some plausible scheme to lead me into a trap. I understand your motive in this instance."

Scraggs arose and walked the floor for a minute or two, then stopping in front of Green, said:

"John Green, I wouldn't pay you fifty per cent. on the investment you made in those lots. I don't want them, and wouldn't buy them at any price. But talk is useless, so I have no more to say until I would talk to you in less than six months from today. I will tell you what I have said, and you will say that for once Scraggs advised you aright. Good day."

These last words of Scraggs made a slight impression on John, and he left the office in a halting state of mind. Once or twice as he walked down the street he stopped, half inclined to go back and repeat Scraggs' offer.

"If I sell out," he mused, "I will make a large profit, and besides being able to redeem my farm will have a couple of hundred dollars left towards building a home. It may be that Scraggs is right, too, and that by holding on I will lose all. Perhaps it would be safer to sell."

Then on the other hand he would recall Scraggs' reputation as a schemer and an unprincipled chaser, and noting the improvements that were under way and the avidity with which other people were taking up "bargains" in real estate, he would conclude that he was right, and that Scraggs only wanted to get the lots himself because there was a big outcome to him. Reasoning pro and con, he finally decided to keep his lots, and accordingly went home.

perfectly satisfied that he had acted for the best.

The boom at Paradise Park kept rolling on and on, reaching out farther and farther until the winter came on and the severe storms and cold weather put a check to all improvement. That winter was a hard one, and there was a great deal of snow, so that people ventured out but little, and as a consequence the excitement at Paradise Park died down and the sales of real estate ceased.

The investors felt no uneasiness, however, being assured that with the return of fair weather the boom would set in again with renewed vigor. In the spring the railroads were to be located and work was to begin on them at once; and all the other public improvements were to be got under headway, too; so then the real boom was to come, and only a few short months of inactivity was to be come between.

This winter passed, and by the middle of March all the snow was gone from the plains, and the tender grass began to appear. The boom at Paradise Park revived, and while real estate transactions resumed their wonted strength, the sound of the hammer, the saw and the trowel were heard on every business building. The frame of the new hotel were started up all about the center of the town, while residences were being constructed in every quarter. Unprecedented activity reigned.

Business men said that the place would have twenty thousand population within the year, and that the town would be a great deal more than a village.

But day after day passed, and no more toward constructing railroads or other public improvements was made. Yet the people were strong in the faith and kept the boom rolling.

CHAPTER XII
A MONTH PASSED, and then the great boom at Paradise Park received a check. A railroad line was located through that section of Kansas, but it came not to or through the place. It ran within five miles of the town, and the company located a depot and laid out a townsite at the point nearest to Paradise Park.

As soon as this fact became known as a certainty the great boom burst and the entire western metropolis lay flat. The sale of lots stopped short, and within three days the value of real estate ran down until it was impossible to sell lots at any price. The noise of the hammer, the saw and the trowel, and unfinished buildings were left so.

Then a new town on the railroad was started under the name of Magic City. Scraggs, the inevitable, shook the dust of his boots from his feet, and went down to Magic City to inaugurate a boom there, and he succeeded so well that within a few days there was a grand rush of people to the new town. The boom at Paradise Park began to rage. The people who owned houses at the old town moved them to the new, and within a couple of weeks the town of Paradise Park was a new town. The one proud infant wonder of the world was blotted out of existence, and nothing save a few old foundations and the painted corner stakes remained to mark the spot where the embryo metropolis had stood.

The collapse had been sudden and unexpected, and hundreds of poor settlers who had invested their little all in the hope of making a fortune, awoke suddenly to the fact that they were ruined, and that their hopes and their money had gone down together in the great wreck. Some who had a small amount of means left invested in the new town in the hope of retrieving what was lost in the old, but hundreds had nothing left to invest, and all they could do was to moan and curse Scraggs.

This latter pleasure, however, was denied John Green. He could mourn the fall of Paradise Park, but he had no occasion to curse Scraggs, for Scraggs was long since dead and gone. John took his loss seriously to heart, and many were the wakeful nights it caused him. The sum of money was small, but it was all that stood between his family and want if he should fall on his crop the coming season, as there was a fair prospect of him doing since the season had opened up exceedingly dry.

Mary, ever patient and long suffering, deplored the loss of the money equally as much as John did, but made a prudent compromise, considering it a mere trifling loss, and she was willing to bear her own loss, and she and her husband should have a large part of her husband's. She saw nothing in the future of John's loss, yet for John's sake she affected to see a great deal, and the more he regretted, the more cheerful and hopeful she became, and the more lightly she treated their loss.

"I am an old maid," John remarked one day, "that you take such a heavy view of the situation. The loss of the money, and the knowledge that it was my fault, is enough to make me despise myself, but I am not so bad as I have been blamed me as I deserve to be blamed. I believe I'd have gone mad."

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—New Orleans Molasses Candy: Take one cup of New Orleans molasses, one cup of sugar, a piece of butter the size of an egg (sweet, not salty), and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Boil these together for ten minutes, then add the mass to a bowl of cold water, and stir it hardens when dropped into cold water. When done stir in a teaspoonful of soda, and beat well. Pour into buttered pans, and when cool cut into slices. If desired, it is desired, about the same as just before pouring out to cool.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—To Cure a Beef Tongue: There is no better method of curing beef tongue than the following: Make a brine by adding to three gallons of water four and a half pounds of salt, three-quarters of a pound of dark-brown sugar, and three ounces of saltpeter. Let all boil together, and skim; then remove the brine from the fire, and add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cayenne, and when quite cold put in the tongues. They will be fit to use in a week, and will be found of a color and flavor to satisfy the most exacting and fastidious.—Good Housekeeping.

—Marble Veal: Boil, skin and cut a pickled tongue as thin as possible and beat it in a mortar with a pound of butter and a little pounded mace, and mix the butter and mace together until it is like mud, then pour four pounds of lean veal and pound it in the same way; then put some of the veal into a large potting pot, and lay some tongue in, lumps over the veal in different parts; then nearly fill with veal, press it down hard and pour melted butter over it. When served cut it across in thin slices; put them on a dish and garnish with curled parsley. Keep it in a cold place, tied over with a paper.—Boston Herald.

—Cardinal Jelly: Soak one ounce of gelatin in three-fourths of a pint of water for one hour; then add one-fourth of a pound of white sugar, the juice of two lemons and the whites of two eggs whisked in a little cold water; let settle a few minutes, then pour through a flannel jelly-bag into which a small piece of cinnamon has been broken. Strain through this two or three times to get the flavor of the cinnamon. When it is quite clear add nearly half a tumbler of red currant jelly. Pour into a mold to set. When required turn on a glass or silver dish and garnish with white flowers.—Housekeeper.

Figured Silks.
Black silks patterned in bright little set pompadour sprigs continue to hold a prominent place in popular favor. The light weight silks of this sort that were popular during the summer have given place to those that are heavier, and the colors which make up the figures are brighter and more numerous. Even more convenient because of the ease with which they can be changed from this kind than the standard black silk of time-honored fame. It is also effectively trimmed in black lace, which is one of the most popular garnishes for the present season. A neat dinner costume of this black figured silk. The skirt is made over a plain silk foundation and is laid in flat plaits meeting in front and is fan-plaited at the back, the plaits are shaken under the plaits in front and cut out at the neck. Inside the V-shaped opening are two folds of ermine, ermine, and the double Medici collar is lined with the same material. The skirt is plain which form the front of the skirt are covered with lace and an epaulette of lace finishes the shoulder of each sleeve. At the foot of the skirt is a row of lace corresponding to that used on the bodice.—Chicago Post.

Chicken Pie.
Chicken pie made by this recipe is excellent cold. Save the neck, the liver of the wings, the gizzard and the liver of the chicken, and the feet. Pour boiling water over the feet, leave them a moment, then pull off the outer skin and nails. After these are removed, put the feet with the other parts. They are quite important, as they contain the gelatin which forms the gravy around the chicken when the pie is cold into a delicious jelly. Stew the skinned feet, wing-tips, neck and giblets, which have been well cleaned, in just enough water to cover them; add a slice of onion, one of the carrot, and let the water simmer gradually till it is reduced one-half; add a few drops of lemon-juice or a teaspoonful of tarragon vinegar, and some salted stock, if necessary. Rose & Swango desire to inform the public that they are agents for the most successful preparation that has yet been produced for coughs, colds and croup. It will loosen and relieve a severe cold in less than any other treatment. The article referred to is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is a medicine that has won fame and popularity on its merits, and one that can always be depended upon. It is the only known remedy that will prevent croup. It must be tried to be appreciated. It is put up in 50 cent and $1 bottles.

Didn't Mother Him.
When Sam Jones was preaching in a Western town some time ago he was annoyed by a young man who was whispering to his girl. Finally the preacher could stand the interruption no longer, so he looked straight at the young man and said: "I will pause until the young man in the back of the room gets through talking." The silence was intense and every eye was on the young man, who was still whispering to his girl. He had been so busy that he had not caught the preacher's glance. Mr. Jones repeated his remarks, and this time the young man heard him. Not an instant did he hesitate, but he immediately tried to square himself. While every one was watching him, he looked squarely at the preacher and said: "Go right ahead, Mr. Jones, you are not bothering me."—Toledo Blade.

Consumption Cured.
AN OLD physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. Noyes, 529 Powers Block, Rochester, N. Y.

A Very Lovely Dream.
Henry Ward Beecher used often to quote a remark which he once overheard in the White Mountains at a hotel where he was staying with his family. On the piazza one day a girl near to him said to her companion, a damsel of her own age:
"Oh, Marianne, I do think that some of your tales are too lovely to be true, and it is so appropriate to read up here."
The other smiled self-approvingly.
"You," she said, smoothing down the folds of the frock in question, "think this gown of mine is the loveliest better than any other I ever had on."
N. Y. Mercury.

The senior proprietor of this paper has been subject to frequent colds for some years, which were sure to lay him up if not doctored at once. He finds that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is reliable. It opens the secretions, relieves the lungs, and restores the system to a healthy condition. If freely used, as soon as the cold has been contracted, and before it has become settled in the system, it greatly lessens the attack and often cures in a single day what would otherwise have been a severe cold.—Northwestern Hotel Reporter, Des Moines, Iowa. 50 cent bottles for sale by Rose & Swango.

Kindly Arranged.
Dashed away (to hostess after the evening party)—I want to ask you if I may have the privilege of escorting the two Curtiss sisters home? They are, by far, the prettiest girls in the room.
Hostess—Certainly, my dear Mr. Dashedaway. I was just about to ask you would you be so kind for there is such a scarcity of gentlemen. But (archly) it is rather awkward for you that there are two of them.
Dashedaway—Oh, that's all right (a moment later, to the elder Miss Curtiss)—My dear Miss Curtiss, I am going to escort your sister home. I will be back for you in half an hour.—N. Y. Sun.

Mr. Wm. T. Price, a justice of the peace, at Richland, Nebraska, was confined to his bed last winter with a severe attack of lumbago; but a thorough application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm enabled him to get up and go to work. Mr. Price says: "The remedy can not be recommended too highly."
